TRURSDAY, JULY 7, 1864.

SMALL WE VOLUNTEER, OR BE DRAFTED?

There will undoubtedly be a new call prode by the President for more soldiers. The war is not yet ended, and is not libely to be with the present forces in the fold. GRANT is still fighting his way to Eichmond, SHERMAN is yet confronting the Rebel army in Georgia, and a formidable detachment of LEE's troops is making a sort of foraging excursion into the Cumberland Valley. This is a state of affairs that demands more troops on our side to finish up the Rebellion within a reasonable period.

Congress has recently amended the Enrolment law in such particulars as will render a draft under it much more effectual than heretofore, and the Executive, under the pressure of necessity and in default of any alternative will most certainly order a conscription. But Mr. Lincoln would much prefer getting reinforcements for the army by any other than coercive measures. He knows and feels painfully the jealousy with which the people everywhere regard forced military service and he would not, if he could possibly avoid it consistently with his solemn official duty, resort to that mode of repleting the thinned ranks of the national army. But what else can be do in his difficult and trying situation, unless the people come to his relief? They would not have him now give up a contest that has been prosecuted for three years and a half, has cost so vast an outlay of blood and treasure, and which seems to be so near a successful conclusion.

Is there then no alternative to a draft? Can the Government not get the troops it needs at this most interesting and critical period of the war, without drawing lots for them and then driving them into service by military compulsion? It certainly is not creditable to our national character to have the President constrained by sheer necessity to drag men from their homes and business, to defend themselves and their possessions against a Rebellion which threatens to destroy the Government, and with it all that every citizen enjoys through and under its protection.

Drafts are not only obnoxious to popular feeling or prejudice, and dishonorable to the nation, but they have proved sadly inefficient. They raise but few men in proportion to those enrolled and drawn, while those who are actually mustered into the service go most unwillingly into the field, and lack all the inspiration of a cause in which men freely enlist. Hence the drafted men have never proved of much value in the army, and are not desirable. But they must be taken for what they are worth, if recruits can be obtained in no other manner.

Philadelphia at least may relieve herself from the next draft by timely efforts to sequre volunteers to fill her quota. Some wards have already furnished troops enough to exempt them from the next call for three hundred thousand men. They are credited with a surplus on previous calls sufficient to cover their quota on that which is impending. And what one or two wards have done by the energetic exertions of committees of their citizens, all may do within a brief period of time, if the right efforts are promptly made. Let the work, then, be begun at once. Time just now is important, and success in so good and necessary a matter should not be jeopardized by delay.

The advantages of volunteering over a draft. are very succinctly stated by Mr. Wilson, in some remarks made upon the subject in the United States Senate. He gives the result of a draft for twenty-eight thousand men, in what State is not mentioned, but the figures are supposed to indicate general averages throughout the Union. Of the twenty-eight thousand, fifteen thousand men were held to service, showing that thirteen thousand were exempted for causes specified in the law. The remaining fifteen thousand were thus disposed of: -eight thousand four hundred paid commutation money, three thousand furnished substitutes, and four thousand four hundred were held to service. But of this latter number, in consequence of the time for presenting themselves for service not having expired, it was supposed that some might present substitutes and others pay commutation. The number of these could only be estimated, and the result of a draft for 14,000 men was taken as a guide. Of that number but 1200 or 1300 presented themselves, and from 1500 to 1600 of the number had obtained substitutes. On this ratio Mr. WILSON supposed that out of the 28,000 drafted, probably not more than 2000 or 2700 would report for duty, and with the 3000 who had furnished substitutes, the whole number of men obtained out of the 28,000 called for would be about 5700 men.

THE WANT OF LABOR. We stated yesterday in our local column that a Mr. SINCLAIR, of Edinburgh, Scotland, and who has for some time past been connected with a movement to facilitate the immigration to the United States of persons on the other side of the water who are deslrous to come here, had an interview on the subject with the Board of Trade. It is to be that he will be given by our citizens and Government every possible ald and encouragement in his important work, and we are glad to learn that he conveys on his return to Scotland orders to a large number of skilled workmen.

We are greatly in need of more laborers in this country. We never have had snough at before it began, there is a pressing and constantly growing necessity to make up the deficiency at least. The men we have lost stantly growing necessity to make up the deficiency at least. The men we have lost from the various walks and departments of labor have been turned into soldiers, who require a large amount of all sorts of provisions, munitary amount of all sorts of provisions, munitions, clothing, and so forth, to maintain them tions, clothing, and so forth, to maintain them the was committed for trial.

consumers while diminishing the producing class. This is one reason why the prices of all the necessaries of life have risen so enormously within the last two years, and unless something is speedily and effectually done to augment production in proportion to the enlarged demand for food, clothing, and the like, the cost of everything of the kind must still go on advancing indefinitely.

There is, then, an urgent occasion to multiply the number of our producing population, by which means we shall be able in time to preperly equalize again the supply and demand of all the necessary products of art and industry.

Within the last two years foreign immigratien to this country has been quite large, and yet the influx of people from Europe, great as it has been, has hardly made a sensible impression on the labor market. Men in all departments of work are exceedingly scarce, and wages have mounted to unprecedented rates. Both public and private improvements have beer seriously delayed for want of mechanics, and even the lowest grade of working men, while in various parts of the North the agricultural interest has suffered and is yet suffering to a most distressing degree for the lack o hands to till the soil and gather the crops.

It was lately announced by the Ohlo States man, that there are two thousand farms and two thousand seven hundred wheat fields in Ohio alone, left without a man to attend to them! This statement, we think, is extravagant; but we doubt not that there is more truth than poetry in it after all. And the dearth of labor in the farming districts of Obio is probably experienced in all the Northern States. Hence it is of vital importance to our Government and people that every practicable stimulus to immigration should be promptly put in operation. It is on productive power applied in the development of our vast material resources that the National Treasury must depend for a large part of its internal revenue, while the ability of the people to bear taxation must preserve a certain relation to the industrial prosperity of every community and class. Let us, therefore, do all we properly can to stimulate immigration.

AN INTERESTING MEETING .- A meeting of the Committee on Labor, Income, and Revenue, of the late Sanitary Fair, was held at the Board of Trade room vesterday afternoon. The meeting, it was intended, should be a final one, but so many matters are set to be adjusted, and subscriptions yet to be received, that it was judged best to hold a meeting at another time, subject to the call of the officers.

The reports of the various committees were submitted, and it was stated by Mr. Bond, chair-man, that the total proceeds of the Fair, through this committee, had already reached about $230,000. Pottaville had contributed $10,500; Berks county about $9,000, and Seranton $10,700. The Fire Department, which it is understood will report brough this committee, will furnish about $15,000 as their share of the good work. Refore the adjournment of the meeting, Mr. M. J. Mitche-son offered the following resolutions, which were the adjournment of the meeting, Mr. M. J. Mitcheson offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

INQUESTS IN HOMICIDE CASES.-An inquest was held by the Coroner yesterday in the case of the homicide on Monday night, at No. 118 Lombard street, during which a wounded soldier named Henry O'Neil stabbed a man named Henry Force. The evidence went to show that the act was committed in self-defense, as O'Neil endeavored to get away, and did not use the surfe until he had been beaton so badly that the blood was cozing from his car and his eye was swelled shut. The jury rendered a verdict that the act was committed in self-defense, but held the prisoner for a hearing in the Quarter Sessions. In the case of Patrick Smith, who was shot by John Carr, at Eleventh and Christian streets, on John Carr, at Eleventh and Christian streets, on Monday night, the Coroner also held an injuest. The pistol belonged to Smith. He handed it to Carr to fire. The latter took it, the weapon was discharged, and Smith fell mortally wanned. Carr exclaimed it was an accident, and walked away after handing the pistol to one of the deceased's companions. When arrested, he said he walked away as he was frightened, and did not walked away as he was frightened, and did not walked away as he was frightened, and dot not know what to do. The jury held the prisoner to await the action of the Criminal Court.

ART GALLERY SALES.-The closing sales at the Art Gallery of the late Great Central Fair took place last evening. One handred and twenty-five ictures were disposed of by Mr. Birch, the auctioneer, the sale being prolonged until after 11 o'clock. The prices obtained were merely nominal, and of some two hundred pictures sold up to 10 o'clock last evening, but about ive thousand dollars had been realized from the auction sales. The andience numbered between three and four hundred persons, but the purchasers were confined to some five or six gentlement.

The "Irrepressible Conflict" Still Progressing

To the Citizens of Philadelphia —
Agreeably to provious notice, I shall now review the personalities and other outside matter as contained in the article headed "Philadelphia Against the World," and signed by heavid Evans.

As the thief, when hard pushed, is the first to cry "stop thief," so is the man who has villed, headered, and wroughtly accused his neighbor, the first to cry villes, and to claim the people's sympathy.

The first growingut point in this article is the writer's very time the world only—extremely modest surely. This point (having been replied to by Measrs Lillie & sion) I pass over by simply saving first it is easy to show that Lillie & Son are much the largest patrons of this city and state of my Baf Manuscuture in the United States, as they use so much more material than any other—the product of this State is read as a street from Tim Evants of This man of the different ways the common save is common for the different ways the common save is comed. Now, if the reader will rise to the article in Tim Evants of This could be comed as the largest particularly that here ways were of common save is comed. Now, if the reader will rise to the article in Tim Evants of This grown to burgian; and I now my the different ways are growned to common save is comed.

But it seems to suit the writer's use to leave out those facts in this relined. But the writer's case to leave out those facts in this relined.
